Health Care

Interested in living and working in Australia?

Are you chasing the sun and warmth, and some of the most amazing beaches in the world?
Australia may be just the destination for you.

St John of God Health Care has a huge range of opportunities for health care workers to continue their careers in Australia. We run acute care hospitals, as well as dedicated mental health facilities and community services, and provide the entire range of clinical specialties across our organisation.

As one of the largest Catholic providers of health care services in Australia, St John of God Health Care is a great place to work with loads of opportunities, benefits to support you, and a great work life balance so you can have an enjoyable, active, and safe time down under.

Our caregivers come from diverse backgrounds and belief systems and you don't need to be Catholic to work with us.

We have more than 15,500 people working with us. We call everyone who works with us, regardless of their role, caregivers in recognition of the valuable contribution everyone makes to the health and wellbeing of those we serve.

What else should you know?

We run 27 facilities, including 17 hospitals, across Australia. So if you want to live in Sydney, Melbourne, or Perth, or experience life in regional or smaller coastal towns, we have opportunities for you.

We are seeking a huge range of health care workers to join us. Nurses, midwives, doctors, allied health practitioners, and even people working in support industries such as digital and technology, community care and disability fields are needed right now.

Private and public hospitals

St John of God Health Care operates 17 hospitals across Australia, including both private and public facilities and services.

In Australia, more than 41 per cent of all hospital admissions are to private hospitals<sup>1</sup>. In fact, 68 per cent of all elective surgery in Australia is undertaken in private hospitals.

Our private hospitals offer a huge range of procedures, surgeries and treatments, with the most common being chemotherapy, ophthalmology and orthopaedics. Our maternity services are also highly sought after, with care provided in our hospitals and in the home.

We also operate public hospitals, specifically St John of God Midland Public Hospital in Western Australia and Hawkesbury District Health Service in New South Wales, on behalf of the relevant State Governments. Some of our private hospitals also provide public services on behalf of the government.

In Australia, private and public hospitals work in tandem to ensure those in need have availability of services and our healthy and vibrant private health care system helps take pressure off public hospitals, while providing consumers with greater choice.

New South Wales

New South Wales is home to some of Australia's most iconic landmarks (Sydney Opera House, Sydney Harbour Bridge, and Bondi Beach just to name a few).

It is a hustling and bustling city which more than 5 million people call home and more than 9 million people visit each year!

Being such a big city, it is also incredibly diverse. In fact, more than 40 per cent of Sydney's residents are born in another country including China, India, England, Vietnam and Philippines (Australian Bureau of Statistics).

It is relatively easy to get around Sydney, with buses and trains running regularly and a new light rail system in the CBD. Most Sydney-siders use cars to get around as well, with an extensive road network.

Sydney is located right on the coast, meaning you can live close to the beach and watch the sunrise over the Pacific Ocean each morning. Or you can choose to live inland and enjoy the amazing forests, bushland and wildlife that can only be experienced in Australia.

You rarely have to worry about the weather either, with mild winters (19 degrees and sunshine on some days) and hot summers.

Sydney is located on Australia's east coast and is a short plane ride to Melbourne, Queensland and the Great Barrier Reef, or even New Zealand.

We have three hospitals located in Sydney, New South Wales, and we also run community mental health services.

Burwood

Sydney, New South Wales

St John of God Burwood Hospital is an inner-city mental health hospital which provides a comprehensive range of outpatient and inpatient services. The hospital has a strong reputation for perinatal mental health, having established the first mother and baby unit in Sydney.

Burwood is located in the inner-West of Sydney and has easy access to the CBD. It has great shopping centres as well as a range of entertainment and dining options nearby, as well as schools, parks and outdoor activities.

Richmond

New South Wales

St John of God Richmond Hospital is a highly-regarded mental health hospital offering nationally-recognised services for post-traumatic stress disorder and trauma which are particularly sought after by first responders. The hospital also offers a comprehensive range of mental health services for inpatients and outpatients.

A huge redevelopment is underway at the hospital which will increase bed numbers and transform the patient experience with all rooms to be single, private rooms and new amenities such as a wellness centre with gym and pool to be added.

The hospital's setting is idyllic, set in the foothills of the Blue Mountains the hospital has extensive grounds and amazing views of the surrounding region. Richmond is about one hour from the Sydney CBD, which offers all the benefits of a regional, outdoors lifestyle but with easy access to the amenities of the city.

Victoria

Victoria is where one of Australia's most vibrant and active cities, Melbourne, is located.

Melbourne is often referred to as Australia's cultural capital, thanks to the huge number of art galleries, as well as a thriving theatre and music scene which welcome globally renowned productions and performers.

More than 5 million people live in Melbourne, and double that number (10 million) people visit each year.

Melbourne, and more broadly Victoria, has a diverse population. About 35 per cent of people living in the state were born in other countries including India, England, China and New Zealand (Australian Bureau of Statistics).

Melbourne is one of the easiest cities to navigate, with iconic trams, as well as buses and trains getting you from one end of the city to the other with ease.

Getting out of Melbourne and travelling around Victoria is simple. Big regional and coastal towns are only about one hour away, and a quick trip in your car will transport you from metropolitan hubs to some of the most beautiful coastal regions and dense forests in Australia and the world. Victoria is located on Australia's south east coast and is a short plane ride to Sydney, Queensland and the Great Barrier Reef, or even New Zealand.

Melbourne and Victoria's weather is slightly cooler than that in the rest of Australia. It also snows in some parts of the state so you can pack your skis or snowboard, along with your surfboard.

We have three hospitals in Melbourne and four hospitals located in regional and coastal Victoria. We also run at home nursing services, community mental health services, and disability and accommodation services.

Ballarat

Victoria

St John of God Ballarat Hospital is one of Victoria’s largest regional private hospitals and offers an extensive range of acute services for the community. While the hospital has existed since the early 1900s, the facility has continually been expanded to ensure modern services, and equipment are available to meet the needs of the community.

A redevelopment is currently underway at the hospital which will add a new 10-bed critical/intensive care unit, central sterile services department (CSSD), four operating theatres, a 30-bed inpatient ward, four additional operating theatres, and a new catheter lab.

Ballarat is a major historical town in Australia, with gold found in the town sparking the Victorian goldrush in the 1800s. It is just 90 minutes away from the Melbourne CBD and offers a laid-back lifestyle, with a huge range of outdoor and cultural opportunities to experience. The town has a thriving café, restaurant and pub scene so there is something for everyone.

Western Australia

Western Australia is the biggest state in Australia in terms of size and, while there is a lot of space, the majority of people live on the South West coast.

The beach lifestyle is huge in Western Australia. The state's capital city, Perth (home to more than 2 million people), stretches up and down the coast meaning that you are rarely more than 30 minutes to a beach. Even the state's smaller towns, such as Bunbury and Geraldton (where we have hospitals) are on the coast.

Western Australia is considered to be a bit warmer than other parts of Australia, which is why so many people choose to live near the water so they can cool down with a quick swim in the ocean.

Many people from other countries have chosen to make Western Australia home, with about 36 per cent of people born overseas, in countries including England, New Zealand, India and South Africa (Australian Bureau of Statistics).

Perth is often the first port of call for tourists and holiday makers wanting to explore the state. Getting around is easy, although hiring or purchasing a car is the easiest way to get out of the city.

A trip south of Perth is a must do for anyone coming to the state. Internationally acclaimed wineries, beaches and forests are all within a day's drive south. Travelling north usually involves a plane trip, which is well worth the effort, with some of the most undisturbed scenery, historical regions and wildlife on offer.

While Western Australia and Perth are known to be isolated, they are actually very close to the South East Asian region with Bali and Indonesia a short plane trip away.

We have five hospitals in Perth and two hospitals located in coastal regions. We also run at home nursing services and community mental health services.

Geraldton

Western Australia

St John of God Geraldton Hospital is a small, community-focused acute private hospital which cares for people living in the coastal town and regional areas in WA’s Midwest. The hospital closely supports the public hospital, Geraldton Regional Hospital, to ensure the community has access to a comprehensive range of services.

Geraldton is about a four and half hour drive north of Perth (or a shorter plane trip) and offers all the benefits of living in small town while being a fantastic base for exploring the state’s world famous coral coast.

Geraldton offers a huge range of outdoor activities for adventure seekers and families alike. If you love the beach, boating or fishing this town has everything you could want.

St John of God Bunbury Hospital is a modern facility serving the regional communities of WA's south west coastal towns, including the regional city of Bunbury, and its major centres comprising of Collie, Busselton and Margaret River. It is co-located on the South West Health Campus with the public hospital.

In the beautiful South West of Western Australia, you can easily enjoy natural beaches, vineyards, forests, caves and more, all in a single day. With 24 national parks, there's plenty of nature and wildlife to see and meet, while rich soils and fertile land provide foodies with the best in fresh produce and gourmet experiences.

So, whether you're looking to feast on the spoils of nature's pantry, taste world-class wine, spot the biggest and smallest animals on Earth, or surf the perfect wave – discover it all in the South West.

There truly is something for everyone in Bunbury. The quality of life is one of its biggest attractions, offering residents a variety of amenities, schools, shops, beaches and nightlife, all within easy reach. It has everything a family needs, including a university and a regional technical and further education (TAFE) facility, public and private schools, the South West Health Campus and a range of high quality health services, not to mention an extensive and diverse events calendar.

St John of God Subiaco Hospital is the oldest and biggest hospital in our group, having been established in 1898. It is one of Australia's most respected providers of health care services and an internationally renowned leader in clinical trials and research.

The hospital is also a leader in innovation and adoption of new technologies, including the implementation of robotic surgical devices and virtual reality imaging technology.

The biggest redevelopment ever planned for the hospital is currently underway which will add new facilities, technology and equipment, including a new mother and baby unit, dedicated heart centre, and telehealth hub. It will also transform the patient experience.

Subiaco is an inner-city suburb of Perth, about 10 minutes from the city centre and close to some of Perth's most beautiful beaches. It is a vibrant area with a diverse range of trendy cafés and fine dining and shopping options. It also has beautiful parks and open spaces to enjoy. A brand-new high school has opened to serve the community, and our hospital is close to a range of other medical facilities and services.

St John of God Healthcare at Home

St John of God Healthcare at Home is a home visiting service that provides nursing, midwifery, lactation consultations and allied health care to our patients.

Our health care workers are on the road visiting our patients after an illness, surgery or accident, or to help manage ongoing conditions in their own home.

The service provides more than 110,000 home care visits each year and provides nursing, midwifery and lactation support, and allied health services in the home. We are also expanding our virtual care services through St John of God Healthcare at Home.

Roles available

We have a limited range of roles available, in particular nursing, midwifery and lactation consultant, and allied health practitioner roles.

Many of our caregivers who work with St John of God Healthcare at Home also hold positions within our hospitals. This provides a balance of working in the acute setting as well as supporting patients in their own home.
